Dr. Sarvepalli Radhakrishnan, India's second President and one of the nation's most profound philosophers, devoted his life to showing that education is the highest form of service to humanity. Born on 5 September 1888 in Tiruttani, he rose from modest beginnings to become a renowned scholar of comparative religion and a celebrated teacher whose classrooms inspired generations.

He believed that "true teachers are those who help us think for ourselves," insisting that education must nurture both intellectual clarity and moral strength. To him, "the end-product of education should be a free creative man who can battle against historical circumstances and adversities of nature," a vision that remains strikingly relevant today. Radhakrishnan taught that knowledge without character is incomplete and that dialogue, not dogma, must guide the search for truth.

His own life embodied these ideals—bridging Indian tradition and modern philosophy, advocating for peace, and proving that wisdom and compassion belong together. On this 5th September, Times Sphere Magazine and ISRHE salute his enduring message that learning is not merely the pursuit of information but the cultivation of wisdom and the building of a just and enlightened society.

ISRHE'S Vision

India's rapid digitization has brought transformative changes, connecting over 700 million people online. However, the digital divide remains a pressing challenge, with significant gaps in internet access and technology use between urban and rural areas and across socio-economic groups

Digital & Divide

Urban areas, especially major cities, have extensive internet access, high-speed broadband, and advanced digital devices, enabling full participation in the digital economy, online education, and healthcare. In contrast, rural regions face limited connectivity, inadequate infrastructure, and costly devices, restricting opportunities for education, healthcare, and economic progress. This persistent digital divide reinforces poverty and social exclusion, highlighting the critical need for equitable access to technology and internet infrastructure to bridge the gap and promote inclusive growth and social empowerment across all communities.

Cybersecurity in India

The COVID-19 pandemic has exposed the digital divide, leaving those without reliable internet or devices behind, particularly in rural areas. Students struggled with online education, and small businesses faced financial losses. As India becomes more digitally connected, cybersecurity threats like data breaches, ransomware, and phishing attacks have increased, endangering individuals, businesses, and national security.

India has faced major cyberattacks, compromising government, financial, and healthcare systems, causing financial losses, identity theft, and public distrust.
